

CAROLINE in the city

Call Caroline Phillips: PHONE 739-5122 FAX 739-8041 ••• E-MAIL caroline.phillips@ott.sunpub.com PHOTO REPRINTS 739-5117

Musicians in tune with cause

There was sweet, sweet music flowing Sunday from PJ Quigley's Bar and Grill as musicians performed for a fundraiser organized by Ottawa singer and songwriter Tammy Raybould.

Raybould, who is raising money for the Canadian Diabetes Association, collected more than $2,500. Her brother Tony has the disease.

Some 100 supporters turned out for the benefit concert, which included John Allaire, Shane Simpson, Benilda Formoso and others. In the crowd were Raybould's hubby Colin Mills and his folks Russell and Judy Mills.

As a member of Team Diabetes, Raybould heads to Hawaii this December to run a 42-km marathon. She must raise at least $6,000.

Also running in Hawaii, albeit a shorter distance, is Raybould's mom Susan, who owns the Nepean School of Music.

Raybould, whose single Loving You was included on a compilation CD tied to the popular television series Dawson's Creek, releases her third CD, This is Good, in the fall.

Jewelry store owners Marit and Stan Wise hosted a real gem of a party Thursday at their prestigious property in Aylmer, where some 30 guests lounged by the outdoor pool and feasted on barbecued steak and chicken.

On the two-acre property is the Wises' 7,000-sq.-ft. home, built in 1879. Inside are eight bedrooms, six bathrooms, a solid oak library, a billiards room and a separate entrance and stairwell from the bygone era of servants.

Guests included Rinaldo Hair Designers and Spa owners Rinaldo Canonico and wife Pat Rinaldo. The couple's planned expansion of their business into Manotick this fall is sure to delight south Ottawa's style-conscious crowd.

Bob Chiarelli ditched his suit and tie for more casual threads

BENILDA FORMOSO, right, performed with Tina Blair and "Dr. Lee" during the diabetes fundraiser.

Thursday during the 4th annual Mayor's Golf Classic for Child and Youth Friendly Ottawa (CAYFO) and Roger's House.

The event, presented by the Ottawa Senators Foundation and Bell Canada, raised $22,000.

STUNTMAN STU of The Bear 106.9, right, poses with Tim Inglis, past winner of a Spirit of the Capital Youth Award, during the Mayor's Golf Classic.

Among the 80 golfers at the Canadian Golf and Country Club were Sens Foundation president David Ready and Bell Canada's vice-president of enterprise accounts, Gary Cameron. Also present were CAYFO's executive director David Milten and honorary chairman Max Keeping.

A group of women proved Wednesday it only takes a little bit of girl power to make a lot of pedal power.

The fundraising dinner held at the National Press Club collected $3,600 toward a project in Guatemala that relies on pedal-powered machines to support small-scale sustainable development.

Some 60 people, mostly women, attended the dinner organized by Marjorie Cooper, Jane Fordham and Janice Mellor. Guests of honour were Guatemalan ambassador Carlos Jimenez and his wife Sara, who completed an intricate piece of needlework and also hand-painted four terra cotta gilded angels for the evening's auction.

GREG FORSYTH, left, wife Sue and friend Mike Vranas were at PJ Quigley's Bar & Grill on Greenbank Rd. Sunday to support the Team Diabetes benefit concert.

HEALTH REPORTER

Jerri Southcott of A-Channel, seen with 11-year-old son Luke Letourneau, emceed the fundraiser for the Canadian Diabetes Association.

TEAM DIABETES member Christine Kou, seen with husband Iat Chio Kou at the benefit concert, is running the marathon in Hawaii in December.

OTTAWA MUSICIAN John Allaire and songstress Natasha Alexandra each performed at the benefit concert for diabetes.

OTTAWA SINGER and songwriter Tammy Raybould, left, poses with mom Susan, husband Colin Mills, rear left, and brother Tony.